PREFACE.

The committee appointed by the Alumni Association of the College of Physicians and Surgeons (in connection with the Faculty) to prepare a Catalogue of the College, present the accompanying volume as the result of their labors.

The lapse of time since the publication of the last volume (fifteen years), made the task of compilation more difficult than was anticipated. To that fact, as well as to the apathy of the graduates in replying to the circulars, combined with the difficulty in finding the scattered children of our Alma Mater, the delay in the appearance of the list must be attributed. No very great change has been made in the plan formerly adopted. The greatest care has been taken to insure absolute accuracy, and nothing has been assumed regarding facts or identities except the placing an asterisk before all who graduated prior to 1820. The volume has been compiled by Dr. A. E. M. Purdy, supervised by the other members of the committee.

Notwithstanding their endeavors to achieve absolute accuracy, the committee are too well aware that they fall far short of it, but hope that errors may be promptly reported, and above all, that the welfare of the College may not suffer through any abatement of zeal on the part of those who have so far rendered essential services.

Chief among the friends of this enterprise, the committee name with pleasure Dr. A. Norton Brockway, whose researches, particularly in the matter of academic honors, deserve more than a passing recognition.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF THE COLLEGE OF PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS IN THE CITY OF NEW YORK.

The College of Physicians and Surgeons, N. Y. City, was chartered March 12th, 1807, by the Regents of the University of the State of New York, pursuant to an Act of the Legislature, passed March 24, 1791. The officers were elected May 5, 1807, and the first course of lectures, commencing November 7th of the same year, were delivered in a small two-story building in Robinson Street. About the close of the Session, however, the College, having received from the Legislature an endowment of twenty thousand dollars, was enabled to purchase an edifice in Pearl Street better adapted for their purposes, which was formally opened for the reception of students in November, 1808.

The Medical Department of Columbia College having been discontinued in November, 1813, the union of the two schools, as recommended by the Regents of the University as far back as April 1st, 1811, was, at length, consummated March 7th, 1814, and a commodiously arranged brick building on the north side of Barclay Street, near Broadway, secured for the new organization.

This alliance, however, proved to be of but short duration, since some of the Faculty withdrew, and, under the authority of Queens College, N. J., established the "New Medical Institution" in a large building in Duane Street. This latter school suspended in 1816.

At this crisis in its affairs, the Regents of the University reorganized the College under an entirely new charter, which gave its management to a Board of twenty-five Trustees, whose tenure of office was subject to the will of the Regents themselves.

In February, 1821, to the dissensions between the College and the Medical Society of the County of New York, which began sometime during 1819, there succeeded new causes of discord between the Trustees and the Faculty. These culminated in the resignation of the entire Faculty in April, 1826, and the appointment of a new corps of Professors a few months afterwards.

The original Faculty, soon after their resignation, revived the Medical Institution, under the auspices of Rutgers (formerly Queens) College, New Brunswick, N. J.; but, by legislative enactment, the diplomas were afterwards rendered so manifestly illegal that the Faculty abandoned the contest and the school ceased to exist.

By a new provision in the Constitution, the Faculty were henceforth excluded from seats in the Board of Trustees, which was now to be composed of a majority of gentlemen who did not belong to the medical profession. As a result, both bodies have since worked in unison for the common good.

The College removed from Barclay to Crosby Street, in November, 1837, where its sessions were held up to the inauguration of the present edifice, January 22, 1856.

Since then, nothing noteworthy in its history occurred until the Legislature, by an amendment of its charter, March 24th, 1860, delegated the authority of the Regents to the Trustees; and, in June of this year also, the institution was constituted the Medical Department of Columbia College, and now bears the title of the College of Physicians and Surgeons in the City of New York—Medical Department of Columbia College.

TRUSTEES

APPOINTED MARCH 12, 1807. RESIGNED IN 1811.

[The Charter of Incorporation was granted by the Regents of the University to the Medical Society of the County of New York as a College of Physicians and Surgeons in which "all the members of said Society, and all the physicians authorized to practice in said city, are declared to be Trustees, or members of the said College, and are duly incorporated as such." This Charter contained a full reservation to the Regents of "right to alter or amend the Charter in every respect, and to remove the Trustees, or any of them." The Regents retained the appointment of the Professors, and the Trustees were granted the right of their own President and other officers. By the amended Charter, March 3d, 1808, the Regents were empowered to appoint the President and other officers instead of the Trustees themselves.]
